We have come to a pass;
The “Say Something I’m Giving Up on You” Moment
it’s all about being a {hu}man being afraid of death
finding a genius way to flourish
then being trapped in our own schemes
We do what we do because we are shoring up against the tides of sickness, sorrow, and death.

We were able to do what we do because we abstracted ourselves from being as presenting.
We act like a species driven to extinction by instincts we can redirect but don’t and systems we created ourselves for what we thought was our own good but perhaps isn’t.
The ecological problem and the climate disaster waiting to happen are the fruits of a human hardening into a way of being in the world with others.
Repentance is the process of awakening to the destructiveness of our present way of being and its rejection.
Rebirth is the process of reevaluating our way of being and choosing to realize our existence more creatively.
Unless there is repentance, there is no possibility of averting disaster.

Beyond making adjustments, we need to radically reform our chosen modes of existence.

Humanity is in need of genuine repentance in order to be reborn.
An Areté Production

in partnership with

The Department of Communication, Loyola Schools and the Eugenio Lopez Jr
Center for Multimedia Communication
Executive Producer  Areté

Executive Producers  Ma Mercedes T Rodrigo, PhD
Ricardo G Abad, PhD
D Cortezano
Talent Coordinator
Ivy Baggao

Make-up
D Cortezano
Adriane Ungriano

Areté Office
Vanessa Reventar
RJ Adarlo
Areté Theater Crew

Adriane Ungriano
Jethro Nibaten
John Robert Yam
Justine Ray Santos
Nilo Beriarmente
Rey Sotto
RJ Adarlo
Kevin Duane Ligot
Department of Communication & Eugenio Lopez Jr,
Center for Multimedia Communication

Alejandro Adolfo
Karlo Montenegro
Jeffrey Lorenzo
Christian Valderama

AGUSTIN MARTIN G RODRIGUEZ, PhD
REPENTANCE AND REBIRTH:
AT THE END OF LIFE AS WE KNOW IT
Special thanks to
L'Oréal Philippines